

Hospice

When life's journey nears its end, every visit matters.

At Vivie, we believe that personalized care starts with understanding. Our predictive analytics tool reviews over 900 data points from nursing and social work visits to identify patients who may be nearing the end of life within 7-10 days. This powerful insight, combined with our team's expertise, ensures we provide more personalized care when it's needed most.

Why it matters

More timely visits mean more opportunities to:

- Manage symptoms and improve comfort
- Support families through difficult decisions
- Provide emotional, spiritual, and clinical guidance
- Ensure patients receive the right care at the right time

Technology doesn't replace our experienced hospice clinicians—it helps them recognize sooner when additional support may be needed. (or: when someone may need additional support)

A real example

One of our experienced hospice nurses visited a patient who appeared stable based on clinical assessment alone. However, Vivie's predictive care technology identified the patient as entering a critical stage.

That additional insight prompted increased support over the following days. The patient passed away that weekend, and because our team acted early, both the patient and family received the personalized care, comfort, and reassurance they needed during those final days.

Why providers choose Vivie

- Data-informed care that complements clinical expertise
- More proactive support during the final days of life
- A compassionate team focused on both patients and families
- Confidence that your patients receive personalized care when every moment matters
